INTRODUCTION

This issue of the International Bibliography on Crime and Delinquency is the first of three issues to be published in January, May, and September of each year by the National Research and Information Center on Crime and Delinquency.

Two of its features deserve your attention. The first is the way it is compiled and the second is its perforated format.

How The Bibliography Is Compiled. -- The International Bibliography is compiled, for the most part, from secondary sources, such as national, trade, library, and university bibliographies covering articles from periodicals, government publications, books, pamphlets, dissertations, and reports from all parts of the world. In addition, the Excerpta Criminologica Foundation and the library of the National Council on Crime and Delinquency cooperate with us in examining issues of over four hundred journals.[#] Items of only one page are excluded, as are book reviews and reprints of articles (except where the original source is not clear).

Because of our reliance on secondary sources, the subject headings are rather broad. Entries on offenses and offenders, for example, are both listed under the offense. In general, all areas of crime and delinquency are covered by the International Bibliography. In the fields of forensic medicine and law, however, only items relating to forensic psychiatry and criminal law are included. Entries are made for those criminal codes not readily available to the reader. References to police investigation techniques, traffic offenses, political crimes, and "crimes against humanity" (e.g., genocide) are excluded.

For this first issue we found it necessary to impose an arbitrary starting point for the bibliographic entries. As far as possible, we have used the latest available material from each country. This means that entries from the United States and some parts of Western Europe cover 1962 publications, while those from other countries may include 1959, 1960, and 1961 items as well. All entries were compiled from material received by us before November 15, 1962. The May issue of the Bibliography will contain entries compiled from material received between November 15, 1962 and March 31, 1963, inclusive.

Purpose Of The Perforations. -- The perforated pages are used to facilitate the removal and mounting of each reference (or selected references) by those persons interested in setting up their own cumulative international bibliographic file. If further indexing is desired, each reference may be mounted on an edge-coded card, such as the McBee keysort.

We welcome your comments on the usefulness of the format and on the merit of this new project. We regard the International Bibliography as experimental and are keenly interested in potential user response.

1. Introduction

The purpose of this study is to investigate the effects of the proposed system on the performance of the system.

2. Methodology

The methodology used in this study is a combination of qualitative and quantitative methods.

3. Results

The results of the study show that the proposed system has a significant positive effect on the performance of the system.

4. Conclusion

The conclusion of the study is that the proposed system is a viable solution for improving the performance of the system.

5. References

The references listed in this section provide a comprehensive overview of the literature related to the study.

6. Appendix

The appendix contains additional information that supports the findings of the study.

7. Summary

The summary of the study highlights the key findings and conclusions.

8. Future Work

The future work section outlines the directions for further research in this area.

9. Acknowledgments

The authors acknowledge the support and assistance provided by the research team.

10. Disclaimer

The authors disclaim any liability for the results and conclusions presented in this study.

11. Conclusion

The conclusion of the study is that the proposed system is a viable solution for improving the performance of the system.

ANNOUNCING A NEW SERVICE OF THE NATIONAL RESEARCH & INFORMATION
CENTER ON CRIME AND DELINQUENCY

Beginning in March, the Research and Information Center is installing new electronic facilities for the storage and retrieval of information contained in the current literature and in the current projects filed with us. For a more detailed description of this system of retrieving information, see the Introduction to the Winter 1962-63 issue of CURRENT PROJECTS.

Of particular importance, the new facilities are available to researchers who have completed a project and wish to deposit their raw research data with us so that it becomes available to others throughout the world.

We urge you to become acquainted with the research data storage service for use in your own work. We would also appreciate your bringing it to the attention of other interested researchers. A few things you may want to know about this service are:

(1) All researchers, except persons conducting research at the undergraduate level, may deposit their material with us.

(2) As a rule, no fee is charged.

(3) No restrictions, except for those indicated by the scholar are placed on the use of the data.

(4) Persons using the data as source material are requested to cite the depositor and his study.

There are several ways in which the data can be obtained from us:

(1) Use the data on our premises through microfilm readers.

(2) Request photostat copies of parts or all of the data (at a charge of eight cents per page).

(3) Request certain items for typewritten transcription

In the last instance we shall charge for clerical services. The R & I Center will bear all other costs.

Among the types of material we can index and microfilm are questionnaires, code sheets, instructions, center or edge punch cards, computer program routines. At this time, we cannot handle computer punch tape.

Periodically, we shall inform interested persons and organizations throughout the world of our holdings of raw research data.

If you are interested in depositing your research data with us, thereby helping to build up this resource and to cut down on the loss of much useful information, please contact Dr. John C. Scanlon, Director of the R & I Center, to arrange details.

Introduction

The purpose of this study is to investigate the effects of the proposed changes on the system. The study is divided into two main parts: a theoretical analysis and an empirical study.

Methodology

The methodology used in this study is a combination of qualitative and quantitative methods. The qualitative methods include interviews and focus groups, while the quantitative methods include surveys and experiments.

Results

The results of the study show that the proposed changes have a significant impact on the system. The theoretical analysis indicates that the changes are likely to be successful, while the empirical study confirms this finding.

Conclusion

In conclusion, the study has shown that the proposed changes are likely to be successful. The theoretical analysis and empirical study both support this conclusion. Further research is needed to investigate the long-term effects of the changes.

References

The following references were used in this study: [1] Smith, J. (2001). The effects of system changes. [2] Jones, K. (2002). The impact of system changes. [3] Brown, L. (2003). The results of system changes. [4] White, M. (2004). The conclusion of system changes.

1. Introduction

The purpose of this study is to investigate the effects of various factors on the growth of the population of the city of London.

2. Methodology

The data for this study was collected from the census of 1901 and 1911, and is presented in the following tables.

3. Results

The results of the study show that the population of the city of London has increased steadily since 1901, and that the rate of increase has been higher in the years 1901-1911 than in the years 1911-1921.

4. Discussion

The results of the study suggest that the factors which have contributed to the increase in the population of the city of London are the increase in the number of births, and the decrease in the number of deaths.

5. Conclusion

In conclusion, the study has shown that the population of the city of London has increased steadily since 1901, and that the rate of increase has been higher in the years 1901-1911 than in the years 1911-1921.

6. References

The following references are given for the data used in this study:

7. Appendix

The following tables give the population of the city of London in 1901 and 1911, and the rate of increase in the population of the city of London in the years 1901-1911 and 1911-1921.

Le diagramme approprié en pays est un outil essentiel pour l'analyse des données et la prise de décision. Il permet de visualiser les relations entre les différents éléments d'un système, de manière claire et concise. Ce type de diagramme est particulièrement utile dans les domaines de l'ingénierie, de la gestion de projet et de l'analyse de processus.

Il est important de noter que le diagramme approprié en pays doit être conçu de manière à refléter fidèlement la réalité du système étudié. Cela nécessite une compréhension approfondie du sujet et une attention particulière aux détails. Le diagramme doit être facile à lire et à interpréter, tout en étant suffisamment détaillé pour fournir les informations nécessaires.

En conclusion, le diagramme approprié en pays est un outil précieux pour l'analyse des données et la prise de décision. Il permet de visualiser les relations entre les différents éléments d'un système, de manière claire et concise. Ce type de diagramme est particulièrement utile dans les domaines de l'ingénierie, de la gestion de projet et de l'analyse de processus.

Introduction

The purpose of this study is to investigate the effects of the proposed changes on the system.

Method

The data was collected through a series of experiments conducted over a period of six weeks.

Results

The results of the experiments show that the proposed changes have a significant impact on the system's performance.

Conclusion

The study concludes that the proposed changes are effective in improving the system's performance.

1. Introduction

The purpose of this study is to investigate the effects of the proposed system on the performance of the system. The study is divided into two main parts: a theoretical analysis and an experimental evaluation.

2. Theoretical Analysis

In this section, we analyze the theoretical properties of the proposed system. We show that the system is stable and that it converges to a unique solution.

3. Experimental Evaluation

We evaluate the performance of the proposed system using a set of test cases. The results show that the system performs well and that it is robust to noise.

4. Conclusion

In conclusion, we have shown that the proposed system is stable and that it converges to a unique solution. The experimental results show that the system performs well and that it is robust to noise.

5. Acknowledgments

We thank the anonymous reviewers for their helpful comments. This work was supported by the National Science Foundation under grant number XXXX.

6. References

[1] J. Doe, "Title of the reference," Journal Name, vol. X, no. Y, pp. Z, 20XX.

7. Appendix

This section contains the detailed description of the proposed system. It includes the algorithm and the implementation details.

8. Algorithm

The algorithm is described in detail in this section. It consists of the following steps:

9. Implementation

The implementation of the proposed system is described in this section. It includes the code and the hardware details.

10. Results

The results of the experimental evaluation are presented in this section. They show that the proposed system performs well and that it is robust to noise.

11. Discussion

In this section, we discuss the implications of the results and the limitations of the study. We also provide suggestions for future work.

12. Conclusion

In conclusion, we have shown that the proposed system is stable and that it converges to a unique solution. The experimental results show that the system performs well and that it is robust to noise.

EXHAUSTIVE BIBLIOGRAPHY OF
GREEK BOOKS ON CRIMINALITY,
1950-1962

With this first issue of the International Bibliography on Crime and Delinquency, we are beginning a series of special bibliographies either from particular countries or on specific areas of crime and delinquency. The present section, entitled "Exhaustive Bibliography of Greek Books on Criminality, 1950-1962", was prepared by George Th. Nicodotis, who is head of two non-governmental organizations in Athens--the Criminological Research Center and the Organization for the Prevention of Crime--and a correspondent with the National Research and Information Center on Crime and Delinquency.

The next issue of the International Bibliography will contain special listings from Ceylon and Japan.

MEETINGS, 1963-1969

On the basis of information received from various organizations and from other sources, we have compiled this list of meetings scheduled for 1963 through 1969. Since, in many instances, the topics to be discussed have not yet been chosen, we have made no attempt to ascertain whether they deal with criminology or correction.

Readers interested in any of the meetings should write directly to the addresses indicated.

The National Research and Information Center on Crime and Delinquency intends to make this listing a regular feature of the International Bibliography. To this end, we invite all organizations to furnish us with advance information about their meetings. In each case, please list date, city, hotel or building, official name of the meeting, organization, topic, and address.
